News Around Town

By Mrs. Calvin Robinson

I liked this one:

McGregor was a bit startled when he met an old acquaintance.

"What's the idea," he asked, "of a band of mourning on your left leg, Jock?"

"Me mother has passed away," replied Jock.

McGregor persisted. "But why on your left leg instead of your sleeve?"

"She was me stepmother."

Among those from here who motored to Petersburg yesterday to attend the opening of the Remodeled Bank Building of the Petersburg Savings and American Trust Company were: Representative Watkins M. Abbitt, T. DeWitt Evans, J. Crawford Davidson and Jerry A. Burke. Mr. R. F. R. Steele is president of the bank.

The Town Council met on Monday night. They were delighted to find that the water shortage is over for the present anyway. The tanks are full! But the Town does not plan on being caught again without water. Plans are afoot for drilling another well immediately.

Our friend, J. T. Irby, brought by the following clipping from the "Sixty Years Ago" column of the Richmond News-Leader:

"Virginians were outraged by a Post Office Department move to change the name of Appomattox to Surrender, so that the name Appomattox Courthouse could be affixed to Nebraska, the county seat. Finally, the department relented, after Governor O'Ferrall declared "I don't like to have the word 'surrender' stuck continually in our faces."

Anyone have a picture of the old one-room Evergreen school, which was established fifty years ago? In preparation for the 50th anniversary of the Evergreen school, Mrs. John Kent Hamilton, of Evergreen is anxious to secure such a picture. And doubtless she would like any old pictures of the school and of teachers and pupils.

Mrs. F. F. Carr, President of the Virginia Federation of Home Demonstration Clubs, attended a meeting of the Executive Committee of the Atlantic Rural Exposition Inc., on Tuesday at the Commonwealth Club. Mrs. Carr was elected a member of the Board of Directors at this meeting. She has served as member of the Agricultural Advisory Committee and will continue to work with that committee.

Death of Mr. Page

(Note: The following reprint is from the Georgia paper, concerning the recent death of Mr. Matthew W. Page, 33, formerly of Appomattox).

"Matthew W. Page, 33-year-old Seminole County forest ranger, was found dead in the woods about one hundred fifty yards off Highway 90 near the home of Mr. and Mrs. J. H. Hatcher Monday night at 8:30.

"Hugh Allen, district forest ranger of Camilla, states that Page left the headquarters in Donalsonville, about 8:30 Monday morning. He told his assitant, Gladden Granberry, that he was going around by Mayhaw and make a circuit north of town, looking for pine burrs with seeds to be gathered and sent to the

Famed Westover Church Is To Be Restored After Tour

Richmond, Va.- Eight of Virginia's most historic plantation homes along the James River will be open to visitors October 15 and 16, the height of the Autumn foliage color in the Old Dominion, according to the Virginia State Chamber of Commorce.

The plantations, some of which have never been opened to the public before, are holding an open house for the benefit of Westover Church, one of the first Episcopal parishes in the country. The first parish was formed in 1630 when the Episcopal plantation parishes of Berkeley and Westover, founded in 1619, and the plantation parish at Shirley, established in 1613, joined to form a single church.

Those same three plantations that served as the beginning of the parish will be among those open during the tour. Funds raised from the tour will be used to restore the church to its original Eighteenth Century atmosphere of beauty and simplicity.

In addition to those three plantations, others which will be open are Upper Weyanoke, built around 1650; Sherwood Forest, the former home of President John Tyler; Riverview built in 1860; Mount Sterling, constructed in 1848, and Evelynton, renowned for its superb collection of natiques.

In accordance with the customs of Tidewater Virginia and its hospitality, the gentlemen plantation owners and their friends will serve as hosts for the visitors.

The plantations are located on Route 5, between Richmond and Williamsburg. Block tickets for the entire eight plantations will sell for $5 and single tickets for each plantation will cost $1. Persons wishing tickets in advance of the tour can obtain them by writing Westover Church, Charles City, Virginia. The tickets will be available during the open house period and will be on sale at each plantation at that time.

The first English Bible in the New World was brought to Westover Church as was the first communion chalice, which is still in existence and will be displayed during the open house. The church survived both the Revolutionary War and the War Between the States, when it was used as a stable for General McClellan's horses. The church now stands two miles west of the original location, having been moved 101 years after its founding to a site more accessible to the plantations in the area served by the church.

Berkeley is the ancestral home of a signer of a Declaration of Independence and two presidents. It was built by Benjamin Harrison, and inherited by his son, Colonel Benjamin Harrison, who was a signer of the historical document. It was the birthplace of President William Henry Harrison and the ancestral home of President Benjamin Harrison.

Westover, built by William Byrd, II, founder of Richmond, is now owned by Mrs. Bruce Crane Fisher. While the beautiful grounds of Westover have been open to the public before, the open house will mark one of the rare occasions the home has been opened to the public.

Sherwood Forest is the home of Mr. and Mrs. Alfred Tyler, and is considered to be one of the longest homes in America . . . 300 feet.

Riverview, owned by Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Sackett, of New York, is built on land from an original crown grant.

Mount Sterling is now owned by Mr. and Mrs. H. C. Sledd and contains an original lard lamp chandelier. Evelynton is the home of Mrs. John Augustine Ruffin and contains many original pieces of furniture.

Improvement Of Health of the School Age Child

Chances of today's school age children in Virginia — 5 through 19— dying of disease have been cut by 68.9 per cent in the past 15 years, a State Health Department statistical summary shows.

Thus, excluding accidents, the school age set has more than three times as much chance of living to collect high school diplomas than had the class of '38.

State Health Commissioner Mack I. Shanholtz attributes healthier school life in 1954 to improved environment at home and school, immunization and vaccination programs, improved drug therapy, and education of the lay public on the importance of disease prevention.

Parents of Virginia's 893,603 children of school age can breathe easier knowing that in 1953 only a death from diphtheria occurred in comparison with 38 deaths in 1938. Thirty deaths from influenza and pneumonia occurred in this age group in 1953, compared with 156 in 1938. Three deaths from scarlet fever in 1938 were cut to a flat zero in 1953.

Fifteen years ago, the summary shows, school child deaths from all causes reached 1,333, compared with 664 deaths last year. And, enrollment in public schools last year was greater by 110,000 than the enrollment in 1938.

"Typhoid fever is an excellent example of what can be accomplished by simply cleaning up fly breading areas, improving sewage and garbage disposal, and by improving water and milk supplies," Dr. Shanholtz said. Typhiod cased the death of 21 school children in 1938. This disease did not claim a single life last year.

The figures concerning accidental deaths are not as bright as these on disease-producing fatalities. Accidents accounted for only 21.8 per cent of all school age deaths in 1938, compared with 44.6 per cent in 1953.

Accident prevention programs probably represent the most urgent field for student health education, Dr. Shanholtz believes.
